

ABSTRACT

A method and system of configuring a business process for scheduling the business process comprising a plurality of activities, each activity comprising at least one of a start date type and a stop date type; the activities being in a time relationship to each other; wherein the business process is freely configurable with respect to the plurality of activities and with respect to the time relationships of the activities to each other.